A colourful life

If we were like chameleons, we would change colour all the time. Chameleons live in jungles and change the way they look. They don't change colour so that other animals can't find them, but they do it to show how they feel. They turn some colours when they're happy, and other colours when they're sad. What makes a chameleon happy? Probably catching lots of flies to eat. What colour would you turn if you ate a fly?

2 Why do chameleons change colour?

- A) To show their emotions.
- B) To help them live in jungles.
- C) To hide from other animals.
- D) To make it easier to catch flies.

For sale

This classic English sports car looks as good-as new. It's bright red and has white leather seats. It has had only one owner, who has driven it very carefully for the last 30 years. That's a lot of careful driving. There's not a scratch on it. You'll feel like James Bond when you drive this beauty.

The clever diet

New studies show that there are some simple, clever ways to lose weight. For example, it's better to eat soup for lunch than a salad because it makes you feel fuller for longer. Surprisingly, eating cheese can help remove fat from your stomach. And using smaller plates can trick your brain into thinking you're eating bigger portions. But the easiest way to lose weight is to exercise more and eat less.

4 What helps you not feel hungry for longer?

- A) Using bigger plates.
- B) Eating soup.
- C) Having salad for lunch.
- D) Eating cheese.

Neanderthals

When we think of Neanderthals – people who lived about 200,000 years ago – we think of cavemen hunting animals and fighting. But maybe Neanderthals were more boring than that. Most Neanderthals' right arms were bigger than their left arms. People once thought it was because they held weapons, and killed animals with heavy stones. But now scientists know it's because they spent a lot of their time making clothes from animals. Today, people with one arm bigger than the other are sports people who play games like tennis.

3 Why were most Neanderthals' right arms bigger than their left ones?

- A) They made clothes.
- B) They played sports.
- C) They hunted lots of animals.
- D) They enjoyed fighting.

Subject	Tonight

Hi Maggie,

I won't be here when you get home. I'm buying a present for Bob's birthday party, and I need to go to the bank first. After the bank, I have to get the car from the garage. When I went there today, the mechanics were having lunch and told me they needed another few hours. It looked like a big lunch. I'm meeting Ralph for a beer before the party. I haven't seen him for ages. Let's meet at the party? See you there.

Love,
Nigel

Read the interview with the band Coldplay and questions 1-4. Then choose the correct answer (A, B, C or D) for each question. There is one task for each paragraph in the text.

The Coldplay mystery

1 Interviewer: Today we have with us Coldplay, who were recently called the 'mystery band' by CBS news. This is because the band's last recorded album sold eight million copies, at a time when people aren't buying records. But eight million isn't so much for Coldplay. Their first album, Parachutes, sold ten million, followed by their A Rush of Blood to the Head album, which sold an amazing 15 million copies. Their third album, X & Y, sold 13 million.

2 Interviewer: How did you sell 50 million records around the world?

Chris Martin: We don't know why so many people like us. We can't dance like Madonna, we can't sing like Beyonce and we don't write songs as good as Elton John's. Maybe it's because U2 don't play so much now that they're older. But it might be because we work really hard.

3 Interviewer: And who does the work?

Johnny Buckland: Well, Chris writes songs all the time. He sends himself text messages with ideas, or writes them on his hands. Our studio is also full of pieces of paper with music written on them, and we have to repaint the piano because Chris writes on it. But at least we don't have to repaint the walls; Chris doesn't write on them.

Guy Berryman: But the whole band likes working hard. Our studio has a list of rules written on the wall. One of the rules is that we must all like the songs and try hard to make them better.

4 Interviewer: And when will you stop playing live music?

Chris Martin: Not when we're old or even when we're super rich. I'll never stop writing songs, but I'll stop being a rock star when my hair falls out. That's when I'll no longer want to go out on stage and play live music.
