Read the following passage. Write TRUE if the statement is true, FALSE if the statement is false, or NI if there is no information on this. (5 questions)

Teaching children another language at a young age can give them a lot of benefits. Because using two (or three) languages requires the child to learn how to balance and alternate between them, bilingual children often have sharper brain functions and increased attention span. Furthermore, as working with letters and sounds that come together to form words and sentences is just like solving a puzzle, children who speak more than one language become better at processing information. They also perform better in maths, presumably because words and numbers have much in common. Additionally, children exposed to more than one language are more likely to adapt quickly to a new environment. Learning about other people and cultures through languages also equips bilingual children with tolerance, understanding and empathy for others.
