V. Read the following passage and circle the letter A, B, C, or D to indicate the correct answer to each of the questions.

Some years after developing the animated cartoon and inventing characters like Mickey Mouse. Walt Disney turned his attention to building parks where parents could go on holiday with their children. Now they are among the most popular resorts in the world, but what is responsible for their special appeal? One important factor is that they keep the real world at arm's length. If they search your bag, they do it with a smile. You won't see rubbish trucks cleaning up the mess, it all done at night. They even keep the gardeners cutting the lawns out of sight during the day.

Critics tend to be those who resent being taken care of by the people with a perpetual grin on their paces. They grumble that the child who cries because she drops her ice- cream and is promptly handed another one by a kind attendant may not get same treatment from her parents if she drops it in the street tomorrow. If she ever visits a wildlife park in Africa, the wardens won't be trailing round behind the animals cleaning up the dirt.

In effect, the key to Disney's success is very much like the formula for the success of its founder's films. Everything has been carefully thought out so it's always under control. If you don't like your every need to have been anticipate and if the "unrelenting" attempt to keep you happy drives you mad, stay away.
