II. HOMEWORK

Exercise 1. Write the introduction for these following topics. (you can use the given words)

1. What is the best way to search for a new job? (different ways, recruitment website, effective, extensive)

.....

.....

.....

.....

2. Which would you choose: a job that pays little but gives you plenty of free time, or a job that pays a lot but allows you little time off? (money, important factor, high-paying job, low-paying job, more time to travel)

.....

.....

.....

.....

.....

.....

3. As an employer. Would you rather hire an experienced employee at a high salary, or an inexperienced worker at a lower salary? (save money on wages, recruit inexperienced employees, less reliable, more training and supervision)

.....

Exercise 2. Write the conclusion for the following topic (you may base on the introduction and use the given words)

Do you agree or disagree with the following statement? "Companies should give each employee the same benefits package." Use specific reasons and examples to support your opinion.

1. Introduction: Personally, I believe that companies should not give all employees exactly the same benefits. In order to encourage loyalty to the company, improve employee performance and attract new recruits, employers need to be able to use a variety of benefits packages for their different employees. Basically, employers must be able to offer employee benefits at their own discretion.

Conclusion (entitled, offer different benefits packages, reward, loyalty, performance, adjust, fringe benefits, case-by-case basis, top talent)

2. I firmly believe that employers should offer each employee the same benefits package. By taking this fairer approach, companies can establish a workplace that promotes equality and unity. Moreover, they can avoid any confusion among staff members about what benefits each employee is entitled to.

Conclusion (effective, exact same benefit packages, equality, unity, workforce, costly administrative and account mistakes, confusion)
