Hi Anna,
I went on the website and I have to say I really fancy the Central Park walk. It's a tour with a difference! Last time I was in New York with mum and dad we did the whole sightseeing tour thing – up the Empire State building, up the Statue of Liberty, round Times Square and so on, so it would be terrific to do something different this time. Or maybe the fi lm location tour? It sounds very exciting. On second thoughts, it's really long and I'm not sure Alex would be up to it – his ankle is still hurting after his accident. And what if it rains? Anyway, let me know what you think. It would be good to book something before we go, so we can make the most of our five days!

Tekst C

Magic Tours is a relatively new company to join those already offering a variety of tours of the Big Apple, and it hopes to make its mark by organising unusual tours, as well as the tried and tested ones. Customer satisfaction so far appears to be high, but potential customers should be aware that the walking tours on offer are rather demanding. What is more, in the heatwave New York is currently experiencing, they could even prove dangerous.

Customer satisfaction:
– day excursions out of city: 78%
– city sightseeing tours: 64%
– walking tours: 55%
– film location tours: 85%
– would book again: 91%

Tekst D

Tom: I'm going with my friends to New York for five days. Does anyone know anything about Magic Tours?
Jack: I did the Niagara Falls trip with them in 2021 – it was really good.
Emily: We went for the film locations one last summer – it was a bit long on the bus – but fascinating. I'd suggest trying that.
Mark: A friend of mine's been on that one too! Well organised, and not too pricey. The buses are all air-conditioned! Avoid the Central Park tour – it takes forever. I'd choose the film locations – you might even see one being filmed. Exciting!

TheJourney

I woke with a jolt. Something was wrong. I was lying still, trying to work it out, and then I realised the thing that was trembling was my bed. Where was I? What was happening? I sat upright and my head hit something hard. My heart froze and I started to panic.

It took me a few seconds to accept that the art deco walls around me were not from my bedroom. The window did not look out on the old oak tree. Indeed, the view was completely unstable. There were trees, but they were blurred, rushing past at a rate of knots. And above me my twin sister was still asleep in her bunk bed, gently rocked by rhythmic motions.

I scrambled out of my bunk and started to stare through the window like a child on a first journey. But this travel was no ordinary. The view was breathtaking. I could see the front carriages bending round the track as we approached a tunnel and the excitement was electric. The swaying blue and gold carriages sported the glossy emblems of the Orient Express. Evie and I were on a birthday trip, gifted by our family, on one of the most famous trains in the world.

'I still have to pinch myself, Jazz,' Evie was swinging her legs from the top bunk, her feet tapping my shoulders. The carriages were restored originals and therefore narrow, but the rest of the decor exuded luxury. The whole train did. Definitely not a budget trip!

The first leg of the journey saw us hurtle through France. Now we were snaking our way through the Alps, in our luxurious compartment, glamour on every side.

'Yeah – it's like stepping back in time or into Murder on the Orient Express,' by Agatha Christie,'I whispered. I could nearly see the wonderful detective Hercule Poirot – the main character of the book – interviewing elegantly attired suspects in the Orient Express dining car about a murder that happened in one of the compartments. And that was when we entered the tunnel that had shaved hours off the original journey time. The train suddenly screeched to a halt. My heart froze for a second time.
