

Guessing from context
Data handling
Drafting
Note taking
Organising information
Carrying out Investigations
Locating information
Cooperating with others
Editing
Estimating, measuring and checking measurements

CLIL examples
Collecting then organising information about different forms of alternative energy
Preparing group presentations about the research, development and production of electronic equipment made by different companies around the world
Transferring information about temperatures around the world to a spreadsheet
Writing down first ideas about a painting, then developing them later
Checking a report written by a response partner and suggesting changes to the text
Looking at and guessing the height of a triangle, measuring the height with a ruler and then checking the actual height against the estimate
Looking at a group of mathematical shapes with lines across them and working out that they could be lines of symmetry
Watching a video clip about dances from around the world and then writing down the key facts
Using ICT to find out about different temperatures around the world
Sorting questionnaire data about the local area by different age groups

Recording results
Observing using senses
Planning
Summarising
Reviewing work
Solving problems
Processing knowledge
Using knowledge
Interpreting information
Skimming
Transforming information
Scanning

Looking at historical pictures of manufacturing cloth and commenting on factory conditions
Looking for the best location to put a piece of environmental art
Using a writing frame to plan the stages in a series of electricity experiments
Understanding a concept by watching certain objects stick to a magnet
Adding numbers to a spreadsheet on Excel
Thinking about how you played a melody and deciding how to make it sound more like a waltz
Looking in an index for a formula to help with a maths problem
Looking through new history notes to find out why the prison reformer had support from the government
Deciding how to carry out a fair test in science
Reporting the key points from a debate on different political systems
Reading a text about the development of a new public transport system and noting the key ideas on a concept map
Separating different materials into separate recycling bins