3. Read the passage and choose the best answer:

Plastic bottles are everywhere now. It has become so convenient that people would just buy and throw them away when they finish using them. This is why plastic pollution happens. Over the years, many have suggested that we should reuse our empty bottles and turn them into handicrafts and useful items at home, like candle holders and flower holders. Some even make lamps and purses. Many even make them so beautiful that they give them as gifts to their family and friends. You can also sell them to make money. Many schools also turn plastic bottles into beautiful decorations around their garden sand gates. This not only makes their schools beautiful, but it teaches our children the importance of taking care of our Earth. Another thing we can do is to collect plastic bottles and send them to the recycling centre. The recycled bottles can be made into clothes and carpets. Although plastic bottles can be reused, made into beautiful items, or even recycled, the number of these bottles are still too high. Many still end up in the rubbish sites and they will take hundreds of years to disappear. To deal with the problem, many people are suggesting that we should refuse using plastic bottles in the first place. If we do not buy plastic bottles, the factories will not make so many of them. This can help reduce the number of plastic bottles being thrown away. Therefore, every time you leave your house, we encourage you to bring your own reusable water bottles, so you do not need to buy them from the store. Try to encourage your friends and family to do the same too. Together, we can save the world.
