

Unit 9 – Lesson 7

Choose the correct answer:

Well, I don't know. It seems that people prefer to  by message, whether it's a picture or an emoji. Don't you agree? So, are we  the art of  or, just maybe, playing with  and communicating more? Let's face it, in the past our communication was limited, but now all our friends, family and work colleagues are at our fingertips. Umm, personally, I think text messages allow for a  use of language. English is, after all, always changing. I mean, new words are added to the dictionary  for example,  and . In addition to this, the meanings of words are ever changing and they evolve over time. Look at words such as tweet, google and viral – when I was a kid, they meant very different things. In fact, I don't think the word 'google' even existed! I have to say, I also believe that texting  people to write and communicate more, and this can only mean good things for language use and  ,right?
