

Present perfect; already, yet

When you want to talk about the past, but the date is not important, use the present perfect.

- ✓ Use YET in interrogative sentences, and place it at the end of the sentence.

Have you done your homework YET?

Has the teacher called you YET?

- ✓ Use YET in negative sentences, and place it at the end of the sentence.

No, I haven't done my homework YET.

No, The teacher hasn't called me YET.

- ✓ Use ALREADY in affirmative sentences, and place it between have/has and the past participle.

Yes, I have ALREADY done my homework.

Yes, the teacher has ALREADY called me.

- Complete the sentences with the present perfect.

1. A: _____ Brenda _____ (call) you today?

B: No, she _____ (call) me, but I _____ (receive) some text messages from her.

2. A: _____ you and Ruben _____ (have) breakfast yet?

B: No, we _____. We want to go to "La Fonda". _____ you _____ (try) it yet?

A: No, I _____ (eat) there yet. I _____ (hear) their chilaquiles are really good.

- Drag the words to put them in order.

haven't yet

I

eaten

3. I'm very hungry.

--	--	--	--

already shopping

gone

I've

4. I don't need any groceries.

--	--	--	--

have

I

already been to the zoo

5. What have you done?

--	--	--	--	--

to them

already

I've

talked

6. I called my friends for dinner.

--	--	--	--