My parents say that my brother and I text and surf too much on the internet so they sent us on a weekend course where we had to camp in a forest without our phones or any internet connection. I thought it would be impossible not to check my phone every hour or so. Since going on the course, I've learned I can live without my phone for three whole days and things have really changed.

There were lots of different activities and we were successful at most of them. Doing the washing-up and the cooking was probably the least fun. I also hated not having TV at first. But things like collecting wood to make a fire to keep us warm were okay. I learnt I could actually do lots of things by myself.

After we got home, Mum asked us to turn off the computers and to cut the grass and wash Dad's car. We didn't mind doing it! I feel much more grown up now.
