Plants
The fact that plants do not live a passive life has been known for some time now. Two separate and (1)_____ research studies reveal that these silent things may be 'talking' to each other and us! If you have ever noticed that certain plants seem to thrive (цвести) next to each other, it may not be a (2)_____ or (3)_____ of your superior ardenino skills, but it shows the good neighbouring (4)_____ between the two. At least that's what an (5)_____ team of (6)_____ believes. The evolutionary (7)_____ states that plants use some kind of acoustic signaling to communicate with each other and it may allow the weaker plant to thrive or die. What's even more interesting is that the (8)_____ believes the (9)_____ happens at a very early stage. Monica, who published her findings in the 7th online edition of BMC Ecology, reached this (10)_____ following her study she conducted with some chili pepper, basil and fennel plants. So (11)_____ may be able to use sound to (12)_____ or (13)_____ the (14)_____ of certain plants, helping to reduce their (15)_____ on fertilizers and pesticides.	RELY	1
