

INDICATORS.

Students:

- recognize specific information from an audio when a university professor of literature introduces herself to her new students.
- identify vocabulary words about an announcement at a university by solving listening practices.

Listen to the audio and tick on the correct option

1

Where is the introduction most likely taking place?

- In a company boardroom
- In a university classroom
- At a Christmas party
- At a writers' convention

2

What is the speaker's main purpose?

- To entertain
- To inform
- To inspire
- To enrage

3

What will the listeners probably do next?

- Tell about themselves
- Ask questions
- Take an exam
- Write stories

Listen to the audio and type on the empty spaces the corresponding word you hear.

Let's _____ by getting to know each other. My name's Lucy Miranda, and this is my fifth-year teaching _____ at State _____. I grew up in the Los Angeles _____, and got my BA degree at Cal Poly-Pomona. I then _____ a master's in literature from UCLA. I worked as a _____ for a few years, and tried my hand at writing _____ and a couple of _____. My second novel, "LA Life," was published by a _____ firm, but I had decided by that time that I _____ to teach writing. I _____ in high _____ in Southern California for six years, then at a junior college. _____, I _____ hired at San Diego State University, and was there for four years _____ coming _____. I was married four years _____, and I have a three-year-old _____, Theresa, and a six-month-old _____, Antonio. OK, now I'd like to _____ a little _____ each of you.