Read the story and then answer questions 1-6.

Long, long ago a baby boy was born.
His proud parents were Mr and Mrs Sontonga.
They named their son Enoch.
They belonged to the Mpinga tribe and spoke Xhosa.
When Enoch grew up, he became a teacher.
He loved music and he also loved to teach children.
He would often stand in his classroom and watch the children play, sing and dance outside.
Watching the children, made him wish that one day, all the children of South Africa would be able to play and live together and be friends.
Enoch wrote many songs, but his favourites were those that he wrote for the children to sing. His songs were all about love and peace.
One day, Enoch wrote a very special song. The first words of this song were "Nkosi Sikelel' iAfrika". This means "God bless Africa". Enoch often prayed and asked that the children of South Africa be blessed.
Enoch's song, "Nkosi Sikelel' iAfrika", became famous. A well-known Xhosa poet, Samuel Mqhayi, wrote more words for the song and today all the people of South Africa are proud when they sing it.
Yes, the song that started as "A prayer for Africa" became known as our beloved National Anthem.
