

Something

by <https://www.beatlesbible.com/songs/something/>

I could never think of words for it. And also because there was a James Taylor song called 'Something In The Way She Moves' which is the first line of that. And so then I thought of trying to change the words, but they were the words that came when I first wrote it, so in the end I just left it as that, and just called it 'Something'.
George Harrison

John Lennon and Paul McCartney both rated the song highly. Lennon said, "I think that's about the best track on the album, actually," while McCartney _____ "For me I think it's the best he's _____."

George had a smugness on his face when he came in with this one, and rightly so – he knew it was absolutely brilliant.
And for the first time, John and Paul knew that George had risen to their level.
Geoff Emerick

'Something' has been _____ by a range of performers, including Elvis Presley, Shirley Bassey, Frank Sinatra, James Brown and Smokey Robinson. It has become the second-most covered Beatles song after 'Yesterday'. Sinatra called it "the greatest love song ever written," and made it a fixture of his live set.

I thought it was George's greatest track – with 'Here Comes The Sun' and 'While My Guitar Gently Weeps'. They were possibly his best three. _____ then he had only _____ one or two songs per album. I don't think he thought of himself very much as a songwriter, and John and I obviously would dominate – again, not really meaning to, but we were 'Lennon and McCartney'. So when an album _____ up, Lennon and McCartney go and write some stuff – and maybe it wasn't easy for him to get into that wedge. But he finally came up with 'Something' and a couple of other songs that were great, and I think everyone was very pleased for him. There was no _____. In fact, I think Frank Sinatra used to introduce 'Something' as his favourite Lennon/McCartney song. Thanks Frank.

Paul McCartney