

The Power and Importance of Reading by Luke Bakic

What opinion does Luke Bakic states in his speech?

- a) Great readers make great writers.
- b) Great readers make great writers; great writers make great communicators.
- c) Great readers make great writers; great writers make great communicators; and great communicators make great persuaders. Great persuaders make great societies.

What is the first reason or fact he gives?

- a) Studies have shown that kids spend around 6.5 hours on a screen a day.
- b) Reading takes you to incredible places and adventures.
- c) Not reading can even result in making your brain less active.

What examples does he give to support his first reason or fact?

- a) He says that reading is love in action.
- b) He mentions he gets good grades in spelling.
- c) He mentions the books he has recently read and that he is not familiar with social media.

What is the second reason or fact he gives?

- a) Studies have shown that kids spend around 6.5 hours on a screen a day.
- b) Reading takes you to incredible places and adventures.
- c) Not reading can even result in making your brain less active.

What examples does he give to support his second reason or fact?

- a) He likes to read everywhere and lists some of the books he has recently read.
- b) He mentions he gets good grades in spelling.
- c) He says that reading is love in action.

What is the call for action in his speech?

- a) He encourages people to read whatever they find.
- b) He encourages the use of modern technology and not reading.
- c) He encourages kids to keep on reading and look for good books recommended by other kids.