Nightmare over the Atlantic!

At 11.35 on January 13th 2012 British Airways flight BA 0206 1took off / was taking off from Miami to London. It had been flying for about three hours, and was over the Atlantic, when suddenly a voice 2came out / had come out of the loudspeakers: 'This is an emergency announcement. We may shortly have to make an emergency landing on water.'

Immediately panic 3broke out / was breaking out. One passenger on the flight said, 'My wife and I looked at each other and we feared the worst. We imagined that we were about to crash into the Atlantic. It was awful. Everybody 4screamed / was screaming.'

But about 30 seconds later the cabin crew started to run up and down the aisle saying that the message 5had been played / was being played by accident, and that everything was OK. By this time a lot of the passengers were in tears, and 6tried / were trying to get their life jackets out from under their seats.

Another passenger said, 'The captain didn't even say anything about it until just before we started to land and even then, he didn't explain what 7happened / had happened. It was very traumatic. Everybody was terrified. I can't think of anything worse than being told your plane's about to crash. It 8was / had been the worst experience of my life.'

Later a British Airways spokesman 9said / had said, 'A prerecorded emergency announcement was activated by error on our flight from Miami to Heathrow. We would like to apologize to passengers on this flight.'
