A POST FROM SCOTLAND

I live on a farm in Scotland with my family and our dog, Tweed. My dad always says that Tweed isn't a pet. He's a working dog. He gets up early in the morning and goes out with my dad before breakfast. Tweed helps with the sheep, goats and pigs. But I think he's my pet too, because he usually plays with me when I finish school and he sleeps in my bedroom.

April is my favourite time on the farm. The sheep are with their babies in the field near our house. The babies usually stay with their mothers for eight weeks. I love watching them run and jump. They look very funny.

Tweed isn't always at work with the animals. We've got an interesting hobby – we go to agility competitions. At agility competitions dogs run and jump over special obstacles. Tweed can run very fast, but he doesn't always listen to me. He sometimes runs under an obstacle and that means we never win the first prize. But we love the competitions.
