

Listen and complete the text with the word you hear.
Escucha y completa el texto con la palabra que escuchas.

A habitat is a type of  in which plants and animals live. A habitat is dictated by the climate and the . Deserts, rainforests and mountains are all examples of habitats where you can find particular types of plants and .

Deserts have a dry climate with few plants. There are extremely hot days and very cold nights. It may appear that deserts do not have many animals or plants, but a closer inspection can reveal a high .

Rainforests are wet and warm. It always rains a lot and they have an incredible  of life. There you can see a lot of types of animals and , too.

In the mountains the temperatures are normally low. At very high altitudes there is also less , making life difficult for both animals and plants.

