The salesperson looked up from her cash register. "I don't have plants for sale. I have dishes for sale."

Mitch went down the escalator. He saw customers by the window. Mitch couldn't see what was in the window.

"I would like to buy a plant," said Mitch to the salesperson.

"We have shoes," said the salesperson.

"We don't have plants for sale. Go to the third floor."

Mitch took the elevator. He saw shelves of books. Mitch had an idea.

"I would like a book about plants;" Mitch said to the cashier.

"Follow me. I usually have a good selection of books about plants," said the cashier.

Mitch found a good book. "My mother is going to like this book," he told the cashier. "How much is it?"

"It's on sale. It's $12.00." The cashier said.

Mitch smiled. "Here's $15.00."

"Here's $3.00 change," said the cashier. "Have a nice day!"
