SECTION - I (READING COMPREHENSION)

(Questions 1 - 10) Read the following passage from the lesson " Susrutha, an Ancient Plastic Surgeon"

He lead the stranger to a neat and clean room, with the surgical instruments on its walls. He washes his face with water and the juice of a medicinal plant. He then offered him a mug of wine and began preparing for the operation.

With a large leaf of a creeper brought from the garden, he measured the size of the stranger's nose. Taking a knife and forceps from the wall, he held them over a flame and cut a strip of flesh from the stranger's cheek. The man moaned, but the wine had numbed his senses.

After bandaging the cut in the cheek, Susrutha cautiously inserted two pipes into the stranger's nostrils and transplanted the flesh to the disfigured nose. Moulding the flesh into shape he dusted the nose with powdered liquorice , red sandalwood and an extract of Indian barberry. He then enveloped the nose in cotton, sprinkled some refined oil of sesame on it and finally put a bandage.

In the manner of Susrutha mended a nose some 26 centuries ago. And what he did is not greatly different from what a plastic surgeon would do today. In fact, Susrutha is today recognized as the father of plastic surgery all over the world. His treatise, Susruthasamhitha, has considerable medical knowledge of relevance even today. It indicates that India was far ahead of the rest of the world in medical knowledge.

Born in the 6th century B.C, Susrutha was a descendant of the Vedic sage Viswamithra . He learnt surgery and medicine at the feet of Divodasa Dhanvantari in his hermitage at Varanasi. Later, he became an authority in not only surgery but also in other branches of medicine
