

James is a film director. He is answering some questions to a National Geographic magazine's reporter. Complete the conversation with the questions in the boxes. There are 2 extra ones!

Were you working in a forest when that happened?

Reporter: Good afternoon, James. I would like to ask you some questions.

Will you make another science fiction film in the future?

James: Hi! Go ahead.

Do your daughters know what happened?

Reporter:

When did you start filming the documentary?

James: Yes, I have. I've never been so terrified in my life.

Reporter:

Have you ever been in danger while making a film?

James: No, I was filming "The Deep Sea Challenge", in the middle of the ocean.

Reporter:

Are you going to make another sea documentary in the future?

James: In 2012. It was an unforgettable experience.

Reporter:

How long did you stay under water?

James: It took me six hours. I wanted to continue exploring but there was a problem with my mask.

Reporter:

Have they ever explored the ocean with you?

James: I was swimming and filming the fish.

Reporter:

What were you doing when you discovered the mask didn't work?

James: Yes. They got angry when I told them but then they understood it's part of my job.

Reporter:

Do your daughters like helping you in your films?

James: No, never. They are afraid of sea animals.

Reporter:

EXTRA QUESTIONS:

James: That's not exactly what I'm planning to do. I want to take a break from the ocean!!
