Think globally-buy locally! People who want to protect the environment are usually careful about the origin of their food. Food<sup>1</sup> _____ comes from local producers is OK, but the countries<sup>2</sup> _____ farmers grow exotic fruits are often thousands of kilometres from our shops. A good example is kiwi fruit<sup>3</sup> _____ comes by plane from New Zealand. The boxes of fruit arrive at our airports<sup>4</sup> _____ lorries are waiting to transport them to supermarkets. The supermarkets<sup>5</sup> _____ sell this product are often out of town, so people<sup>6</sup> _____ buy kiwi fruit must drive there. All in all, that's a lot of boxes and fuel- a lot of waste.
