

HOW TO BE ECO-FRIENDLY

David woke up last Saturday and he made a promise to do his best to save the planet. Go on a march? Send emails? Sign petitions? No, just do his bit! When he brushed his teeth, he turned the tap off. Then he had a quick shower, not a deep bath. His mother offered him some ham and eggs for breakfast, but he refused. He just had some cereals and juice because he didn't want to eat too much meat. His mum asked him if he wanted a lift to school. David refused and he walked to school. At breaktime, he went to the canteen. The dinner lady offered him a straw with his drink, but he refused it. 'One-use plastic straws are very bad for the environment,' he said.

At lunch, he said no to a beefburger. Eating a lot of beef is bad for you - and it is bad for the planet. Later, David ate a small bar of chocolate - he is only human! - and he put the wrapper in the right recycling bin. He saw some litter and he picked it up. When he got home, he went up to his bedroom. It was a cold day! His mum asked if he wanted to put the heating on. David refused. He put a jumper on to keep warm. He turned his tablet on and checked his social media sites. He switched his tablet off when he went back downstairs. He turned all the electric lights off and opened the curtains because it was still light. He is only one boy, but, if all boys and girls behaved like this every day, the world would save so much energy!

Number the pictures, in the order that David does the actions. Then answer the questions in full sentences.

<input type="checkbox"/>	<input type="checkbox"/>	<input type="checkbox"/>	<input checked="" type="checkbox"/> 1
<input type="checkbox"/>	<input type="checkbox"/>
<input type="checkbox"/>			<input type="checkbox"/>
			<input type="checkbox"/>
			<input type="checkbox"/>
			<input type="checkbox"/>