GETTING INTO TROUBLE

“Oh my! This is exactly what I wanted!” squealed my older brother Gary in delight. It was a framed poster of his favourite cartoon character, Olaf! “Now, all we have to do is to find the perfect spot to hang it!” My father replied, his eyes scanning the living room. It was a balmy hot saturday afternoon. Mother and Father were going out to do some grocery shopping. “Remember kids, patience is a virtue. Dad and I will be back soon and we will hang the picture. I don’t want you snooping around the toolbox!” warned Mother. We both eagerly flashed our teeth, promising our parents we will behave. Little did I know, my brother Gary had other plans. FORESHADOW

As soon as my parents were out of the door, Gary stated, “We are hanging this!” He proceeded to the room where the toolbox is kept. “Wait. Didn’t Mom ask us to wait?” I protested but it fell on deaf ears. It was not long before Gary convinced me that he was more than capable to hang a silly picture. He was twelve, after all.
