Writing Dialogues

Dialogues are used to show what a character is saying in a story. It helps your reader connect to the character. However, in a composition, dialogue should be sparingly used.

EXAMPLE OF A DIALOGUE

“Be quiet! Or they’ll hear us!” whispered Vera.

Hi,
we are speech
marks. We always
the dialogue. We are here to make dialogues feel safe.

Hi,
we are speech
of the dialogue. We are here to make dialogues
feel safe.

Can you identify which one is a dialogue?

A.

Mother told Hunter that his practice had been cancelled.

B.

“Your practice has been cancelled today,” Mom told Hunter.

A.

“Shh! Or they will hear us!” warned Vera.

B.

Vera warned me to keep quiet.

for detention,” screamed
the teacher.

B.

“Be quiet! or I will send you
the teacher.

EXAMPLE OF A DIALOGUE

“Be quiet,” whispered Vera.

“Be quiet!” whispered Vera.

Whether you use a comma, exclamation mark or a question mark, it comes before the speech marks

Which one is correct?

“Help me”! screamed
Xin yu

B.

“Help me!” screamed
Xin yu

“Can I have more gruel?”
begged the orphan.

B.

“Can I have more gruel”?

Wait ! I have a question?

“Be quiet!” whispered Vera.

Shouldn't it be capitals after an exclamation mark or question mark?

For regular sentences, starting the next sentence with a capital letter is necessary.

John went home. He plopped himself on the couch.

Treat anything within speech marks as separate from the sentence you've written, and make sure it has its own punctuation

“You may go !” Answered Martha.

“You may go !” answered Martha.

However, for full stops, the rules are different. Where you have full stops, they change to commas, and the full stop comes after the dialogue tag.

“The blue one is mine.” said Vera.

“The blue one is mine,” said Vera.

The full stop changes to a comma.

Instead, you will place the full stop after the dialogue tag.
