

* Future trends ECO-TOURISM 2.19

Readers often ask us if travel will become more environmentally friendly in the future. We put your questions to our travel correspondent, Simon Lace, and look at some of the latest ideas.

1. ☐ Will we be able to have luxury holidays in exotic places without damaging the environment? (Steve Southall, Manchester)

SIMON: Building hotels and villas permanently affects the environment, that's why many holiday companies are looking for alternatives. One possible answer is luxury 'holiday pods'. You can assemble them anywhere in the world, from the South Pacific to the Sahara Desert, and they can remain in place for up to fifteen years. Then they can be packed up and moved to another location. The damage to the environment is almost zero: all the waste produced in the pods is collected and recycled. But some people don't believe there's anything particularly new in this. As travel writer Carl Jenkins has said, 'Lots of people already have similar pods, they're called caravans.'

2. ☐ Will I be able to travel by air without producing carbon dioxide? (Kathy Price, USA)

SIMON: Why not try a holiday on a helium-filled airship hotel? As we all know, air travel creates more carbon dioxide than any other form of travel but this revolutionary airship might change that. It will be able to travel for 3,100 miles without stopping, and combines the experience of travelling by cruise ship, hot air balloon and aeroplane. Yet it requires no fuel or runways. The engines use hydrogen and the airship travels at a lower speed and altitude than a normal plane, giving passengers the opportunity to sightsee from above. As the designers say, 'Passengers can see fantastic places without landing and buying a ticket.'

3. ☐ What are the options for young people who care about the environment but also want adventure? (Neeta Madahar, London)

SIMON: A big trend for young people is 'ecoteering': a combination of voluntary work and environmentally-friendly holiday. Choices include replanting tropical forests in India, working as a jungle tourist guide in remote parts of Cambodia, or working with endangered wild animals. According to student Laurence Ford, who spent two months working at a wolf sanctuary in New Mexico, USA, 'The whole experience was awesome. I formed a real bond with the wolves and I loved waking up to the sound of their howling!'

Whatever you decide to do, I think the days of choosing a holiday without thinking about the environment will soon be over. Eco-tourism is growing three times faster than any other kind of tourism!

Reading comprehension

1) Read the text quickly. Match the photos A-C to Simon's answers 1-3.

- A ____
- B ____
- C ____

2) Read the text again and choose the correct answer.

Holiday pods

- a- Cannot be moved from one place to another.
- b- Do not damage the environment.
- c- Have to stay in the same place for fifteen years
- d- Are a way of recycling the waste that tourists produce.

Carl Jenkins thinks that holiday pods

- a- Are bad for the environment
- b- Are not really a new idea
- c- Will eventually replace caravans
- d- Are a very original idea.

The airship hotels

- a- Need to stop often.
- b- Travel faster than aeroplanes
- c- Provide a more eco-friendly way to sightsee
- d- Will be cheaper than travelling by plane.

The airship hotels

- a- need to stop often
- b- travel faster than aeroplanes
- c- provide a more eco-friendly way to sightsee
- d- will be cheaper than travelling by plane

Ecoteering is

- a- A good way of relaxing
- b- A way of attracting more tourist to remote places
- c- Becoming more and more popular with young people
- d- Is very dangerous

Laurance Ford

- a- Enjoyed all aspects of his holiday
- b- Couldn't sleep because the wolves were so noisy

- c- Went searching for wolves
- d- Didn't enjoy his visit to the wolf sanctuary.

Guessing meaning from context. Find a word in the text that means:

- 1) different possibilities. (paragraph 1)
- 2) completely new and different. (paragraph 2)
- 3)how high something is. (paragraph 2)
- 4)a change of fashion. (paragraph 3)
- 5)far away from people and towns. (paragraph 3)
- 6)in danger of becoming extinct. (paragraph 3)
- 7)a safe place for animals or people who are in danger.
(paragraph 3)