Dr. Lopez: I think that the use of plastic straws is damaging the environment; these pieces of plastic contaminate the soil and water and sometimes they end up being eaten by sea creatures causing their death; people should care more about the planet, and reduce the use of straws and other plastics.

Interviewer: How long does a plastic straw take to decompose?

Dr. Lopez: A recent study shows that it takes more than 500 years.

Interviewer: Don't you think that plastic straws could be necessary for daily life?
