III. Read the passage and choose the best answer to the following questions.

Alexandre Yersin was born in 1863 in Switzerland, and died on March 1, 1943 in Nha Trang, Vietnam. He studied medicine in Paris and Berlin.

Yersin left Europe in 1890 to serve as a physician aboard steamships operating off the coast of Indochina and soon began his four-year exploration of the central region. He discovered the source of Dong Nai River and explored the Lam Vien Plateau, where he recommended that a town, the future Da Lat, should be built. In 1892 he joined the colonial health service, and was sent to Hong Kong in 1894, where he discovered the plague bacillus while studying an outbreak of plague in China.

The next year, Yersin established a laboratory, later the Pasteur Institute of Nha Trang. Then he prepared serums against the plague in human beings and cattle and studied cattle diseases, cholera and smallpox. To finance the laboratory, he undertook the cultivation of corn, rice, coffee and introduced the rubber to Indochina. In 1903, he founded a medical school in Ha Noi but returned to Nha Trang, where he introduced a source of quinine.
