

Recycling

Fill in each gap with one suitable word.

Recycling is one way we, ordinary citizens, can do our part to keep our planet clean. Recycling is really useful because we not only clean up our environment but we also reuse what would otherwise be thrown away or end up in a landfill site. In the EU recycling is a priority as most European countries make sure that their citizens recycle all household items as paper, cardboard, glass and plastic bottles or metal cans.

We often throw away paper without realising how many trees have to be cut down to make books, newspapers and magazines. Many big cities, including Budapest, are dirty because people litter: they drop wrappers, used tickets and cigarette butts and packets. Ideally, all paper should be recycled. In Hungary we can take household waste to collection points where there are usually 4 or 5 big containers, one for paper, two for coloured and white glass and one for plastic bottles. Sometimes there's container for aluminium cans as well. In some European countries, like Germany or Britain, residents are given special bins and plastic boxes to collect recyclables, which are then emptied, usually once a week, just like their rubbish bins.

Choose the correct word.

The other thing which people throw away – in the place where they live an eyesore – is the plastic bottle. More and more people carry water with them in plastic bottles because these bottles are lighter than glass ones. When they have finished their bottles, they often don't bother to recycle them, or even throw them away, to put them in rubbish bins. Instead with paper, plastic bottles can be taken to collection points and put in containers there. Since plastic bottles take a lot of space, it's better to crush them so we put them into a container. In Hungary, the caps of plastic bottles are often collected separately. The money given for bags full of caps often goes to a good cause, such as a sick child's hospital treatment.

Beer and wine bottles should not be put out with other household rubbish either. In Hungary we separate coloured and clear glass bottles and put them into two different containers.
