Part 4 Read the passage and answer the following questions.

Mid-Autumn festival is a big festival of Vietnam held on the fifteenth day of lunar August. Children in Vietnam love this festival a lot because they can eat a lot of moon cakes and receive gifts from their parents or grandparents.

The festival is also an occasion for family to gather, eat moon cakes and enjoy the full moon. When I was a child, on the Mid-Autumn days, I used to have a mask on and hold a lantern, form a long line with other kids and parade noisily through all the streets that we can. When I grew up a little more and had a bike, my younger sister and I usually chased the lion dance troops.

Now I am adult and those games do not interest me so much. I often sit in a cafe, drink something and watch children parade through the streets every Mid-Autumn festival.
