Read. Match the two parts of the sentence.

Dan has three different jobs. From Monday to Friday, he is a teacher. But he doesn't teach at a school. He works from his home in London, and he teaches English online. His students don't go to his house.

He usually works in the morning or in the afternoon when he teaches students from Europe or Brazil. He sometimes teaches his students from China or Japan at night, when it is morning for them. Dan often asks his students questions about photos and movies, and they sometimes send him emails in English.

On Friday evenings and on Saturdays, Dan works as a waiter in a French restaurant. He likes the job because it helps him meet new people, and he can eat there, too. He says the food is great. Dan can also play the guitar, and he often plays in a band with his friends on Saturday and Sunday evenings.
