CINEMA – DRAG AND DROP

action	a bit part played by a famous actor who would ordinarily not take such a small part blockbuster	the most important character in a movie, often distinguished by gender cast	work performed on a movie after the end of principal photography; usually involves editing and visual effects flashback	a movie that presents the characters and / or events chronologically before the setting of a previously filmed movie out-take / goof	a filmed story of a person's life story B-movie	anything an actor touches or uses on the set; e.g. phones, guns, cutlery, etc.
post-production	a take of a scene not used in a movie; in some movies shown in the closing credits stunt double	a collective term for the actors appearing in a particular movie Score	the use of computer graphics to create or enhance special effects biopic	what is called during filming to indicate the start of the current take flashforward	when a movie is released for public viewing sequel	the musical component of a movie's soundtrack release	a scene that breaks the chronological continuity of the main narrative by depicting events which happened in the past cliffhanger	arrangements made before the start of filming; this can include script editing, set construction, and casting prequel	a low-budget, second tier movie prop	a movie that presents the continuation of characters and / or events of a previously filmed movie pre-production	a movie which is a huge financial success lead role	a performer who specifically takes the part of another actor for a stunt cameo	a scene that breaks the chronological continuity of the main narrative by depicting events which happen in the future
CGI	a moment of high drama, frequently used at the end of series; named for the (now clichéd) practice of leaving a hero or heroine hanging onto the edge of a cliff
Set	a short trailer that is generally released many months before a movie is actually released, to give a brief peek at what the movie will be like, and to build audience anticipation teaser trailer	an environment used for filming; when used in contrast to location, it refers to one artificially constructed	