THE FIRST DAY

Dan was feeling nervous. He had worked in various Saturday jobs before, but never for a big company like this. In fact, it was his first real job since finishing university.

The building in front of him seemed huge, and hundreds of people were walking in through the front doors. Taking a deep breath, he joined the crowd and stepped inside.

He soon found the reception desk. 'Excuse me,' said Dan, trying to be polite, 'but it's my first day. I was wondering where my office is.'

'I see,' said the young receptionist. 'What's your name, please?'

'Oh, Dan Jones,' was the reply. 'I'm supposed to be working for a Mr Wells.'

Dan wondered what Mr Wells might look like. He imagined a tall, old man, with grey hair, a beard, and glasses. He expected the man to be strict and serious.

Suddenly he heard a voice behind him. 'Dan? Hi! I'm Jason Wells!' Turning around, Dan saw a man in his early thirties. 'Before we start, let's grab a coffee at the company café. It's on me!'

Dan thought that he would like his new job.

- Dan had not worked for before.
- Dan didn't know where his office was because it was at work.
- He was surprised to find that his boss was than he had expected.
- Dan's boss suggests that they

I'll write to you again when I arrive in India! The best part is that I will be staying with an Indian family.
I am going to teach English to young children. I'm having the best time in India.

Dear Sally,

I hope you're having fun on holiday. I'm writing to tell you about what I am doing this summer. Do you remember when I couldn't decide whether to get a job or to travel? Well, I found a way to do both!

My flight leaves next week, so I'm spending the weekend packing for the trip. I hope I don't forget anything. I'm so excited to have this adventure! The job lasts a month and I will be in Dharamshala in the north.

You know how fascinated I am by Indian culture; now I can learn more about it firsthand. I hope my hosts will teach me how to cook some of my favourite Indian dishes! But I'm mostly looking forward to the job.

I'll also help out at the local orphanage. I love working with children, so I think this is the perfect job for me! I should get back to packing now.

I can't wait to hear what you're doing this summer, too!

Write soon!

Hi Mark,

Sorry to bother you, but my colleague called in sick so I need to work late tonight. We have a really important project so I need to stay. I won't be home until after 11pm. Could you help me out and take care of Ginger this evening? Just give her a cup of dry dog food and some fresh water, then take her for a quick walk. I'd really appreciate it, and so would Ginger! I'll make you breakfast to say thank you! I can do your favourite - a full English!

Thanks a million! I owe you!

Brad

Hi Sue,

Sorry to you, but I have a serious problem. My cousin Paul is arriving today and his flight at 7 pm. I'm late tonight so can't him up from the airport as! Want to me out? Can you please bring him from the airport to my flat so he doesn't have to for me to finish work? I can for your petrol. He's tall, with short brown hair and blue eyes. He'll be a red T-shirt and blue jeans. You'll him in the arrivals area.

Thanks a lot! You're the best!
