CLASSMATE: So Jane, why have you been so quiet today? Is there a problem?
JANE: Oh, yes. There is a big problem.
CLASSMATE: Why? What happened?
JANE: I was working on my science project last night. I spent almost the whole day working on it… I had a lot of information, from articles and stuff. I had finished five or six pages, and I was writing more… and then the power went off!
CLASSMATE: Oh, no! Were you doing it all in the computer? Did you save the document?
JANE: Yes, all in my laptop. And I hadn't saved the document. I thought the computer did that automatically.
CLASSMATE: Yes, they do save those things automatically – so maybe you lost some information, but not all of it. Did you check?
JANE: Yes. But the problem was that the system crashed somehow. The program wouldn't start again and when it finally did -nothing! Puff! All gone. I lost my paper!
CLASSMATE: Oh, that's awful! That's due tomorrow, and the teacher said there would be no exceptions.
