Battleship is war-type game. Therefore it's a game.

To play battleship, you two pieces of paper, two pens, two players.

The rules are very easy.

Each player will draw two grids on his/her paper. One for his/her ships, one for his/her ships.

Usually, a grid 10 columns and 10 lines. Columns are usually labelled A and lines are usually labelled 1 to 10.

The players position their ships on their own grids. They can be positioned vertically or horizontally but they can be positioned diagonally.

The game is usually played with 5 types of ships :

The carrier occupies five squares.

The battleship occupies four squares.

The cruiser occupies three squares.

The submarine occupies three squares.

The destroyer occupies two squares.

The positions of each ship is therefore absolutely secret.

Off course, your opponent can't see your ships' positions.

Off course, players may not see their ships.

Once the game is set, a coin determines who starts first.

Then, each player fires one shell.

If a ship is hit, the owner must say « hit » - or « a hit in the water » if no ship is hit.

If a ship has been completely hit, the owner must say « sunk ».

The winner is the player who has sunk all his/her opponents' ships.

The game is very funny, very easy and it's a classic game. A very young child can play and it will be enjoyed by every one from 7 years old people to 77 years old people.
