First Person Point-of-View

Jenna and Savannah were buzzing with excitement. They carefully packed their bags and double-checked the list to make sure they remembered everything they needed for their week at Girl Scouts Camp. Jenna was nervous that she would forget something important or that she would miss her mom. Jenna wondered if Savannah was nervous too. This was Jenna's first year at the camp, but she had heard about all of the new things she would get to try, and couldn't wait to get there. Jenna was most excited to go horseback riding. She loved reading books about horses, but had never been able to ride one before. Jenna hoped that Savannah would also like riding horses.
