Part 4
Reading

Read and circle the best answer.

Road accidents are one of the main causes of death all over the world. However, traveling by car is safer now than in the past. There are three main factors involved in road safety. Firstly, drivers and walkers must be trained in safe road use. Secondly, roads must be safe. Finally, cars must be safe. In the last 100 years, governments have trained drivers and walkers. They have also helped to improve road safety by asking drivers to reduce speed near schools and in residential areas. There is also a speed limit in towns and on motorways. Car makers have improved the safety of cars. For example, they have belts for all seats, front and back, and special glass of the windows. There are fog lights to help you see the car
