b) But he admits that our current love for firewood is a truly modern indulgence. "In the old days I don't think there was any romance in it at all. It was a very, very hard way of surviving. It's a paradox really because the luxury and the mindfulness where we can embrace the moment and have this wonderful time in front of the chopping block was such completely absent in those days.

11. Проанализируй текст, выпиши по одному лишнему слову из каждой строки:

1 People used to think that they taking a gap year was negative. In the 2 past you took a gap year if you had to retake exams or had been 3 problems between finishing school and starting a higher education and 4 then starting as a career. But now, universities positively encourage a 5 gap year and employers are such happy to give jobs to students who 6 take a gap year. A year out between school or at college and higher 7 education or employment, can give to young people useful learning
8 experiences, help them pick up both new skills and make them more 9 independent. Employers and universities much want to see evidence of 10 enterprise, your maturity and commitment both in and outside formal education.
