A lesson in friendship

Zamir and Nadeem had been great friends since the age of five. They used to go to the same primary school. When they finished it, they went together to secondary school. That school was a 20 minute walk from their village in a town on the other side of the river. Every morning, Zamir and Nadeem used to walk there and back together.

They didn't always see eye to eye. They didn't use to argue much, but occasionally they had arguments about school. They were both competitive and wanted to get the best marks in their class. One wet Wednesday afternoon, they were walking back from school together, as always, but on this occasion Zamir was angry with Nadeem. Nadeem had got the highest mark in a test that day and he kept on talking about it. Zamir thought Nadeem was only doing it to make him feel bad. Anger took control of him and finally, in a moment of madness he turned and slapped Nadeem in the face. Nadeem was shocked at first, but then he picked up a stick and wrote in the sand by the side of the road: 'Today my friend Zamir slapped me'.

The pair of friends carried on their way home in silence. The rain kept on falling. As they got closer to the river, a section of the river bank broke because of the rain and the water carried both boys into the river. Nadeem couldn't swim but straight away Zamir was there by his side, pulling him to a safe place. After Nadeem had calmed down, he took a sharp stone and wrote on a big rock: 'Today my friend Zamir saved my life'.

Zamir said, 'Earlier, you wrote in the sand that I hit you, but now, you've written on a rock that I saved you. Why?' Nadeem replied, 'Writing in the sand disappears quickly, but when friends do good things and show us kindness, we should always remember it, just as the writing on the rock remains forever.' When Nadeem had finished speaking, Zamir put his arm around his shoulder and they continued on their way home.
