

Essere literally means “to be”, while stare translates as “to stay”.

1. To Express Feelings

Same as in English, you use the verb essere before an adjective to say that you're happy, angry, sad and so on

- Sono felice – I'm happy
- Maria è arrabbiata – Maria is angry
- Luca e Paolo sono tristi – Luca and Paolo are sad

2. To Tell Where You're From

- Sono italiano/americano/spagnolo – I'm Italian/American/Spanish

3. To Describe Someone Or Something

You use essere to describe someone physically and also for his/her personality traits:

- Laura è bella/intelligente/estroversa – Laura is beautiful/smart/outgoing
- Questo libro è nuovo – This book is new

4. To Say Where Something Is Located

- Marco è a scuola – Marco is at school
- Roma è in Italia – Rome is in Italy

5. To Talk About One's Profession

- Mio padre è avvocato – My father is a lawyer
- Luca è medico – Luca is a doctor

Esserci

1. To Express The Presence Of Something

Whether it's abstract or not, you can express the presence of something or someone with the forms “c'è” (there is) or “ci sono” (there are):

- C'è tanto lavoro da fare – There's a lot of work to do
- Ci sono molti libri sul tavolo – There are many books on the table

2. To Check If Something Is Clear Or Not

For instance, during a lesson or an explanation:

- Ci sei fin qui? – Are you following me?/ Is it clear so far?
- Sì, ci sono – Yes I am (it's clear)

Stare is also widely used in Italian. We've said before that it literally translates as "to stay", and occasionally as the verb "to be", which may confuse some students.

1. To Ask Someone How He Or She Is

- Come stai? – How are you?
- Sto bene, grazie – I'm fine, thank you

2. To Say Where Someone Is

You can use stare to indicate where someone is located or will be located:

- Questo weekend starò a Napoli – I'll be in Naples this weekend
- Tuo figlio è grande abbastanza per stare a casa da solo – Your son is old enough to stay home alone

3. To Say Where Something Is Located

- L'ufficio di Andrea sta in centro città – Andrea's office is downtown

4. To Form The Continuous Tense

- Che stai facendo? – What are you doing?
- Dove stai andando? – Where are you going?
- Luca sta studiando – Luca is studying

5. To Form The Imperative Mood

Stare is used together with some adjectives such as "solo", "calmo", "zitto", "tranquillo", to invite someone to act in a certain way or to do something:

- Sta' zitto – Be quiet
- Stai tranquillo – Don't worry
- Vorrei stare solo – I'd like to be alone
- State calmi – Please calm down

6. To Describe Or Talk About Someone's Health

- Sta molto male – He's really sick
- Ieri avevo la febbre, oggi sto molto meglio – Yesterday I had a fever, today I feel (I am) better.

7. To Mean "To Fit", "To Suit"

Stare can be used as a synonym for the verbs "to fit", "to suit":

- La macchina è già piena, un'altra valigia non ci sta – The car is already full, there's no room for another suitcase
- Questa giacca mi sta benissimo – This blazers suits me well

8. To Say That You Agree To Do Something

Stare can be used to agree to someone's plan, meaning "I'm in".

- Andiamo al cinema, vieni? Sì, ci sto! – We go to the cinema, are you coming? Sure, I'm in!

9. To Indicate That Someone Is About To Do Something

The combination of stare + infinitive means that someone is just about to do something. For instance:

- Sto per andare al supermercato. Ti serve qualcosa? – I'm about to go to the supermarket. Do you need anything?

10. To Form The Present Continuous

You can form the present continuous by using stare + the gerundive of the acting verb:

- Luca sta mangiando – Luca is eating
- Dove stai andando? – Where are you going?

11. To Say "Leave It"

In Italy the sentence "lascia stare" is used a lot, meaning "don't do it", "leave it", or "it's not necessary".

- Nel pomeriggio vado a fare la spesa. Lascia stare, sono andata io stamattina
I'm going to do grocery shopping today. Leave it, I went this morning
- Ti serve aiuto? Lascia stare, riposati pure Do you need help? It's not necessary. Take a rest
