

Drag and drop the right sentences from the box into the blanks to make a coherent dialogue:

I'll send him a voice message:

You know studying means having time to sit down and process the information.

Sorry, teacher. I couldn't study yesterday.

And on the way, we will stop to buy some drinks for tonight.

I hope he doesn't stop talking to us from now on!

No comments! I should have studied more.

I think we will always remember jumping into a swimming pool full of icy water.

Teacher: I regret to inform you that you haven't passed your exam.

Phil: (1).....

Teacher: Why not?

Phil: I had a party last night.

Teacher: Well, when you know you have an event, try to start studying beforehand. (2).....

Phil: Thanks, teacher. See you in March.

Minutes later

Phil: Hi, Mark!

Mark: How did you do in the test?

Phil: (3)

Mark: Do you regret going to Tom's party last night?

Phil: Yes. But there are things I will never forget doing at that party!!

Mark: Ha! Ha! (4)

Phil: Yes. We should have another party tonight.

Mark: And this time, we should remember to invite Frank. He was really angry with us because he wasn't invited!

Phil: Yeah! I can't understand how we forgot to send him a message.

Mark: (5).....

Phil: Try sending him a message right now.

Mark: (6) "Hi, Frank. We didn't mean to hurt you, man. We are getting together again tonight. Shall we pick you up?"

Phil: OK. Let's get going. (7)
