1. Different abilities
2. Emotions improve memory
3. Helpful unusual situation
4. Incredible possibility
5. Useless life without memory
6. Memory improvement
7. Information on its own place

Memory

- A. Try to imagine life without memory. It would be impossible. You couldn't use a language, because you wouldn't remember the words. You couldn't understand a film, because you need to hold the first part of the story in your mind in order to understand the later parts. You wouldn't be able to recognize anyone — even members of your own family. You would live in a permanent present. You would have no past and you wouldn't be able to imagine a future.
- B. Human beings have amazing memories. Apart from all our personal memories about our own lives, we can recall between 20000 and 100000 words in our own language as well as possibly thousands more in a foreign language. We have all sorts of information about different subjects such as history, science and geography, and we have complex skills such as driving a car or playing a musical instrument. All these things and countless others depend on our memory.
- C. How well you remember things depends on many different factors. Firstly, some people naturally have better memories than others, in just the same way as some people are taller than others or have different colour eyes. Some top chess players, for example, can remember every move of every game that they have ever seen or played.
- D. Secondly, research shows that different things are stored in different parts of the brain. Ideas, words and numbers are stored in the left-hand side, while the right-hand side remembers images, sounds and smells. In most people one side of the brain is more developed than the other, and this may explain why some people can remember people's faces easily but can't remember their names.
- E. Thirdly, we all remember exciting, frightening or dramatic events more easily. This is because these experiences produce chemicals such as adrenaline, which boost your memory. They say that anyone who is old enough to remember knows exactly where they were on the day when radio and TV told the shocking news that the President of the USA John F. Kennedy had been killed.
- F. Fourthly, the context in which you learn something can affect how well you remember it. Tests on divers, for example, showed that when they learnt things underwater, they could also remember those things best when they were underwater.

Запишите в таблицу выбранные цифры под соответствующими буквами.

Вопрос

Прочитайте текст. Определите, какие из приведённых утверждений 13–19 соответствуют содержанию текста (1 – True), какие не соответствуют (2 – False) и о чём в тексте не сказано, то есть на основании текста нельзя дать ни положительного, ни отрицательного ответа (3 – Not stated). Запишите в поле ответа цифру 1, 2 или 3, соответствующую выбранному Вами варианту ответа.

Changing Greenland

Greenland is the largest island in the world but has a small population of 56,000. Many of these 'Greenlanders' live close to the coastline because a large part of the country is covered with ice and glaciers. More than a quarter of all the people live in the capital, Nuuk. Since the 1960s, the country has had economic difficulties and social problems. Its traditional industry - and its biggest - is fishing but the country still imports much more than it exports. Now, however, life is about to change dramatically for many Greenlanders - and all because of the weather.

Most scientists agree that the world's climate is getting warmer and you can already see the difference in Greenland. For example, small icebergs - about the size of city buses - are floating near the coast. They have broken off from much larger areas of ice, further out in the ocean because of the change in temperature. Furthermore, the huge sheet of ice which covers Greenland is shrinking by about 75 cubic kilometres each year. If all of Greenland's ice melted, sea levels across the world would rise by 7.5 metres.

One industry that is benefiting from the melting ice is the oil industry. Nowadays, the sea around the west coast of Greenland has no ice for six months of the year. This means oil companies can explore this area. They plan to drill for oil in the next few years. Greenlanders have mixed feelings about this modern development. The country's prime minister, Kuupik Kleist, explains the dilemma: 'The Arctic people are the ones most exposed to climate change but we need a strong economy and we have to utilise the opportunities that oil could bring us. We don't have any other natural resources for the time being that hold as much potential as oil.'

Farming will also change. The growing season is longer with spring arriving earlier and longer summers. On the one hand, if the country produced more of its own food, it wouldn't need to import so much. On the other hand, some farmers are worried. They think the drier summers might create new problems. For example, last year, the summer was so dry that farmers produced half the normal amount of food.

I spent my last night in the town of Qaqortoq with farming families at their annual celebration before the summer begins. After dinner, everyone started singing this traditional song: "Summer, summer, how wonderful, how incredibly good. The frost is gone, the frost is gone". The song is about the importance of summer in a place where, in the past, the winters were long and the summers were short. As nature and the weather changes in Greenland, I wondered if they would still sing this song in a hundred years' time. They might not.
