

B1 Reading Part 6 - FREQUENT ANSWERS FOR THE OPEN CLOZE

Articles: a, an, the Determiners: so, such, not, no, this, that, these, those, if, unless, all, every, each

Auxiliaries: should, may, can, could, might, will, would, is, are, was, were, do, does, did, must, ought to

Prepositions: on, at, in, out, up, down, for, with, into, around, about, like, through, over, under, before, after, to, of

Adverbs: always, often, sometime, never, able, since, yet, still, already, just, for, ever,

Relative pronouns: which, who, that, whose, when, where, why, when

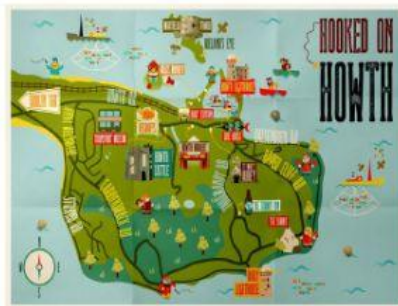

Quantifiers: much, many, (a) little, (a) few, a lot (of), some, any, no, plenty (of), none, both, all, either, neither, each, every, (the) other(s), another, little

Comparatives: as, than, more, less, fewer, like

Connectors: however, but, whereas, although, even though, though, while, and, in addition, also, too, for example, like, such as, because, as, since, because of, due to, In conclusion, to summarise, in summary, so, therefore, thus, hence, nevertheless, moreover, when, firstly, secondly, lastly

Example:

Howth Village – Dublin

Howth (/ˈhooθ/ HOHTH; Irish: Binn Éadair, meaning "Éadar's peak") is a village and outer suburb of Dublin, Ireland. The district as a whole occupies the greater part of the peninsula of Howth Head, _____ forms the northern boundary of Dublin Bay.

Howth has been settled _____ prehistoric times, and features in Irish mythology. A fishing village and small trading port from at least the 14th century, Howth _____ grown to become a busy and affluent suburb of Dublin, with a mix of suburban residential development, wild hillside and heathland, golf courses, cliff and coastal paths, a small quarry and a busy commercial fishing port. The only neighbouring district on land is Sutton. Howth is _____ home to one of the oldest occupied buildings in Ireland.

Howth has some things that make it unique. _____ the one hand, it is a town closely linked to salmon fishing, so it is a good place to try it; and, on the _____ hand, it has a Viking past as some of the local souvenir shops will remind us.