

Harmony Hall by VAMPIRE WEEKEND

BEAR WITNESS- FORGIVE THE SIGHT - GREAT SURRENDER- IN SUMMERTIME – WAS DIGNIFIED – A NERVOUS HEART THAT BEATS – WANNA SING – CROOKED HANDS

| | |
|------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|-------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|
| We took a vow Now we find ourselves in late December I believe that New Year's Eve Will be the perfect time for their But they don't remember Anger wants a voice, voices Singers harmonize till they can't hear anything I thought that I was free from all that questionin' But every time a problem ends, another one begins CHORUS: And the stone walls of Harmony Hall Anybody with a worried mind could never Of wicked snakes inside a place you thought I don't wanna live like this, but I don't wanna die Ooh, ooh, ooh I don't wanna live like this, but I don't wanna die | Within the halls of power liesLike a Young Pretender's Beneath these velvet gloves I hide The shameful, of a moneylender 'Cause I still remember Anger wants a voice, voices Singers harmonize till they can't hear anything I thought that I was free from all that questioning But every time a problem ends, another one begins CHORUS : CHORUS IS REPEATED |
|------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|-------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|

Harmony Hall by VAMPIRE WEEKEND

BEAR WITNESS- FORGIVE THE SIGHT - GREAT SURRENDER- IN SUMMERTIME – WAS
DIGNIFIED – A NERVOUS HEART THAT BEATS – WANNA SING – CROOKED HANDS

| | |
|------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|-------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|
| We took a vow Now we find ourselves in late December I believe that New Year's Eve Will be the perfect time for their But they don't remember Anger wants a voice, voices Singers harmonize till they can't hear anything I thought that I was free from all that questionin' But every time a problem ends, another one begins CHORUS: And the stone walls of Harmony Hall Anybody with a worried mind could never Of wicked snakes inside a place you thought I don't wanna live like this, but I don't wanna die Ooh, ooh, ooh I don't wanna live like this, but I don't wanna die | Within the halls of power liesLike a Young Pretender's Beneath these velvet gloves I hide The shameful, of a moneylender 'Cause I still remember Anger wants a voice, voices Singers harmonize till they can't hear anything I thought that I was free from all that questioning But every time a problem ends, another one begins CHORUS : CHORUS IS REPEATED |
|------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|-------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|

