It changed the world!

In my opinion, the invention that has changed the world is the computer. We use computers every day and they can be found everywhere. We use them at work, in shops and at home – they are found in smartphones and washing machines. It's difficult to imagine life without them.

The first computers were invented more than seventy years ago. One of the first computer scientists was Alan Turing. His computer was named the Bombe. It could make millions of calculations quickly, but it was a big computer. He needed a team of people to work it.

Today computers are completely different from the machines of the 1930s. They are much smaller but they are also more powerful. For example, the first computers could only make calculations, but a modern smartphone can do a lot of different jobs at the same time. You can send emails, read the news, watch films, listen to music and take photographs with just one small machine.

Another reason the computer is important is because it has changed the way we communicate. With the internet and a computer we can share information quickly and easily with people all over the world.

The information we share is often for fun, for example, music or photos, but the internet is not just for fun. The internet is an important way for people to learn new things because experts share the things they know.

It's difficult to predict the future of computers because they change so quickly. Some people think there will be smart cities that are connected and controlled by computers. Other people talk about computers which are worn inside our bodies. They say that they will make us more healthy or clever. In my opinion, all of these things will happen during my life and I am certain there will be even more exciting things to come!
