

Used to vs. would

When we talk about something that happened regularly or repeatedly in the past but not now, we often use the structures 'used to + infinitive' and 'would + infinitive'.

used to + infinitive

We use used to + infinitive when we talk about things that happened in the past but do not happen now.

In the negative we say didn't use to + infinitive:

I used to live in a large city, but now I live by the seaside.

I didn't use to go swimming everyday.

Did you use to live in a small or large city?

We can use this structure with both states and actions:

Paul used to be very calm when he was younger. Now he's stressed all the time. (STATE)

Paul used to work full-time, but now he only takes on part-time jobs. (ACTION)

would + infinitive

When we are telling a story or recalling a situation from a long time ago, we often prefer to use would to describe repeated behaviour in the past, although both would and used to are possible:

I remember growing up in the countryside. It was a peaceful and simple life. I would pick vegetables every day and from time to time I would feed the chickens with my mother.

Note that would can only describe past events and actions. It is not usually used with states. To describe past states, we can only use used to:

Paul ~~would be~~ used to be very calm when he was younger. Now he's stressed all the time.

Things to remember

- We can also use the simple past to talk about repeated past states and actions.
- If a past action did not happen regularly or repeatedly, we cannot use used to or would
-- we must use the simple past: I moved to London in 2014.
- We normally use would in the context of telling a story or recalling a time in the past. If we simply want to state that we had or did something regularly in the past, we use used to for example I used to play tennis every weekend.
- However, if we recall a time in the past, we can use used to or would:
When I was at school, I would play/used to play tennis every weekend.

Would + infinitive

Complete the story below with would plus the following verbs.
One of the verbs is used in the negative.

eat go out see spend study wake up

When James was a student, his lifestyle was completely different. He didn't have a lot of money, so he _____ in cheap student canteens instead of restaurants. During the year, he _____ with his friends to student bars and have fun. It was the best time of his life.

In his third year, he studied abroad in Italy -- he didn't have a lot of lectures, so he _____ late and go sightseeing during the day.

However, in his final year, he _____ very often because he had a lot of exams. He _____ a lot of time in the library and he _____ his friends as much

Would or used to Complete the sentences below with used to or would.

If both structures are possible, use would.

- Living with Angela was great. Every Friday evening, we _____ (go) to a restaurant.
- I _____ (think) that eating a lot of bread is good for you.
- When I was living in Greece, I _____ (go) to the beach every day.
- My father _____ (work) very hard. He's retired now.
- Jacob's wife _____ (tolerate) his difficult character. Now she can't stand him.
- Living with my flatmate was difficult at first. We _____ (argue) all the time.
- _____ (play) a musical instrument when you were younger?
- It _____ (be) very expensive to travel by plane. Nowadays there are plenty of budget airlines.
- Before Harry won the lottery, he _____ (eat) sardines for dinner every day.
- People _____ (write) letters to each other.
- It _____ (not/rain) so much in my country. This must be the effect of global warming.
- Jack _____ (have) lots of free time. These days, however, he is very busy.

Now answer the following questions using the structures from this lesson:

- Talk about some things you did regularly in your childhood.
- How was life different before the Internet?
- Think about a time in the past prior to lockdown when your life was different. Talk about your lifestyle.