Technology and me

by Sam

I've got a TV and a computer in my bedroom. I do homework on my computer. I surf the Internet, and I chat with my friends. I also often listen to music on my computer. I don't watch a lot of TV because I don't have time.

When I go out, I always carry a mobile phone with me. I don't carry an MP3 player because I can use my phone to listen to music. I send lots of messages to my friends. I don't often phone because texting and instant messaging are fast.

Digital world

Do you spend seven or eight hours a day in a digital world? Many British and American teenagers now spend a lot of their free time on computers, phones, MP3 players and other technology. They often have a screen in front of them, or speakers. These teenagers sometimes spend more time in the digital world than the real world. Their parents and teachers don't think that this is a good idea!

Luke Fruen, a fourteen-year-old from London, says, 'I use my mobile phone a lot. Most of my friends have got one. I text people when I'm on the school bus, and I listen to music on my MP3 player, but we can't use them at school. When I get home from school, I get my tablet and I surf the Internet. I chat to my friends, and I use email, my webcam and Facebook. I use my family's laptop to do my homework. I also download music from the Internet and burn CDs for my friends.'

Professor Rumen from Bristol University says, 'Young people use screens a lot, it's true. But they also use them to do homework and talk to their friends. It isn't a big problem. Technology isn't always bad.'
