A school in the city

LaKeesha goes to a school that doesn't have many things. It doesn't have nice chairs and tables. It doesn't have a nice gym or new computers. The school is old. The playground has old swings. Many students don't like their school. One day in English class, LaKeesha tells everyone to change the school.

If no one wants to do something, they should. LaKeesha goes to the paint store and asks the shopkeeper to give the students free paint. The shopkeeper gives the children different colors. LaKeesha goes to a large supermarket and asks for new swings. The manager gives them some new swings and comes to help them put up the swings. More students and more people from the neighborhood come to help. The school is now beautiful. It has new things. It also has people that care about the school.
