

2) Transformation

Example: Who is your best friend? (good)

- a) Which season do you like _____ – spring or autumn? (many)
- b) The service in this shop is much _____ than in that one. (good)
- c) It is the _____ place I have ever visited in my life. (bad)
- d) Of all friends, Luke is my _____ friend. (close)
- e) Who is _____ girl in your class? (clever)
- f) Do you think the summer Olympics are _____ than the winter Olympics (interesting)
- g) This shirt is too tight. I need something a bit _____. (loose)
- h) The test was really difficult – _____ than we expected. (difficult)
- i) New York is _____ city in North America. (big)
- j) Your mark on the exam is as _____ as Denise's. (high)
- k) The _____ we go, the _____ tired I get. (far, many)
- l) This task is so difficult, can we try an _____ one? (easy)
- m) My room is _____ in all our flat. (big)
- n) My handwriting is _____ than Lucy's. (accurate)
- o) Magazines are _____ than newspapers. (interesting)
- p) You are not as _____ as I I imagined. (tall)
- q) This distance is _____ I have ever gone. (far)

7) Exam task

During the seventies, Gombe became one of the (1) _____ places to work. It is on the border of four different countries and there was fighting between soldiers and rebels. (2) _____ foreigners fled the region but Jane stayed. In the end, she needed a military escort in order to continue her work. In one of her diaries from this period she notices that chimpanzees can also be violent: 'I thought the chimps were (3) _____ than we are. But time has revealed that they are not. They can be just the (4) _____ animals.'

After 1989, Jane left her career in Gombe in order to do other work. She set up sanctuaries for chimps which had been captured or were orphans because of the trade in chimpanzee meat. Nowadays, she spends about 300 days a year giving interviews, talks and lectures, meeting with government officials and raising money for the Jane Goodall Institute which continues her research. She has (5) _____ spare time than she had before but she still spends part of every year in the forest in Gombe, watching her chimpanzees.

DANGEROUS

MANY

NICE

AWFUL

LITTLE