New Year's Eve in the UK

We celebrate New Year's Eve on 31st December. Around midnight, we sing a traditional Scottish song called 'Auld Lang Syne' – we get in a circle, cross our hands, and grasp our neighbour's hands. We sing and move our hands up and down faster and faster until someone falls over. It's really good fun! Ten seconds before midnight, we start the countdown – 10, 9, 8, 7, 6, 5, 4, 3, 2, 1, Happy New Year! Then we all watch firework displays.

We celebrate New Year's Eve on 31st December too. At night, in many towns and cities, there are open-air concerts and parties in the streets. On this special day, we don't go to bed before midnight so we can welcome the New Year with our parents and friends. We watch cartoons on TV till very late and wait for the countdown to midnight. Ten seconds before midnight, we all start the countdown and, at 12 o'clock, we watch firework displays and wish each other a Happy New Year.
